Wedding Bells 2: Willow

Willow rubbed her hands together as she prepared to recite the Wicca wedding ritual that would make her and her love one. Smiling, she began to recite the words, thinking back to the day she proposed to her love and how surprised her love was to hear them.

"I love you so much. I can't live another day without you and me being together," her love whispered to her. "I love you too... Why don't we get married! We can show the world how much we love each other!" Willow answered. Her love stared at her. "But...but...what would our friends...say?" Willow shrugged. "I don't know and I don't care. They probably won't approve because our love is so...unconventional...but I need you!" Her love smiled. "I need you too. So let's do it!"

Her love began to recite the vows along with Willow. Willow watched her love's lips promise to belong to her forever. The priestess conducting the ceremony began to entwine their hands together as she repeated a blessing in an ancient language. Willow and her love embraced, then kissed as their ceremony was finalized. "We're actually married!" Willow and her love cried together.

That night, Willow sighed as she embraced the sleeping body of her love. She pushed back her love's brown hair and thrilled at it's softness. Her love stirred and woke up to caress Willow's cheek. "Oh Willow, I love you!" her love whispered. Willow smiled. "I love you too...Anya."
